Edited by Christos C. Paraskevopoulos, York University, Canada, and Athenian Policy Forum, Andreas A. Kintis and Theodore Georgakopoulos, Athens University of Economics and Business, Greece, and Athenian Policy Forum.

“The Athenian Policy Forum has again collected a set of essays that provide analysis and viewpoints that expand the conventional perspectives on important current economic issues and their economic analysis [This book is] a significant and timely contribution both to current debates about transnational economic policy and to basic economic analysis”

Richard S. Eckaus
Ford International Professor of Economics Emeritus
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

“This volume offers a timely and important assessment of European Monetary Union (EMU) and the Euro and of the spreading integration among the world’s financial markets. EMU is examined for its effects on insiders, would-be insiders, and outsiders. Global financial integration is studied with a focus on market linkages. Along the way, much useful information is provided on the evolution of policies and institutions and on the rapidly changing nature of international financial relations.”
